In novel approach, Vasco PSI croons kantar on Coronavirus awareness

THE GOAN NETWORK

VASCO
Songs have traditionally been used in Goa to convey social, cultural, religious and political messages and Vasco Police did not miss the opportunity to turn to Goa's favourite mode of communication in Vasco on Thursday, in a novel approach to tackle the novel coronavirus.

Equipped with a sound system, the Vasco police hailed at the densely populated Khemado-Vasco area, people expected a speech or some directives from the police.

Instead, PSI Diego Gracias came forward and began singing a Konkani kantar. To create awareness on the coronavirus pandemic, Vasco's Khemado-Rane was also present at the site and the song was written by PSI

Gracias, the music and song had an immediate impact as many residents in the area opened their doors and windows to listen to PSI Gracias delivering the message on coronavirus through the medium of song and music, as he told people to stay home and not venture out of their houses during this trying time.

While it was unclear if the song was written by PSI Gracias, the music and song had an immediate impact as many residents in the area opened their doors and windows to listen to PSI Gracias delivering the message on coronavirus through the medium of song and music, as he told people to stay home and not venture out of their houses during this trying time.

formed that people standing outside could bring the disease home to their children, and reminded the thousands had died due to the disease.

Through his kantar, PSI Gracias urged the people to take a pledge to obey government directives, to maintain social distance and promote hygiene and cleanliness for a united fight against Covid-19.

While many captured PSI Gracias' kantar on their mobile phones, many applauded him at the end of the song and PSI Gracias turned into an unexpected star in Khemado.

In the past, Vasco police led by P.M. Rane has adopted novel measures to communicate directives and alerts, even involving agriculture from Chief Minister Pramod Sawant as well.
